

CALLING YOUNG, DYNAMIC RESEARCHERS TO WORK ON CLIMATE CHANGE IN AFRICA!

African Women in Agricultural Research and Development (AWARD) is pleased to announce that the call for the third cohort of the One Planet Fellowship is open. The call targets high-potential scientists to build a robust pipeline of scientists equipped to help Africa's smallholder farmers cope with climate change. Young, female researchers are particularly encouraged to apply.

“The world needs the next generation of climate scientists to be well equipped for the next generation! Adapting to climate change requires an investment in context-specific knowledge. That’s what One Planet Fellowship is all about,”

Do you know anyone in your institution that would be interested in applying?

Selected candidates participate in an intensive, three-year non-residential, career acceleration process that fosters leadership skills and strengthens research skills. Candidates who complete the three-year process will qualify to become One Planet Laureates.

The call seeks applicants from Algeria, Benin, Burkina Faso, Côte d’Ivoire, Ethiopia, Kenya, Malawi, Mali, Morocco, Nigeria, Senegal, Tanzania, Togo, and Zambia. Deadline for applications is February 15, 2021.

Please share this call widely within your institution/networks, and actively encourage candidates who meet the criteria to apply. Visit awardfellowships.org for more details.

The One Planet Fellowship is funded by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, the BNP Paribas Foundation, the European Union and Canada’s International Development Research Centre (IDRC).

African Women in Agricultural Research and Development (AWARD) and Agropolis Foundation are jointly implementing the Fellowship.
